

GROVE AND GRIMES OPPOSING PITCHERS IN SERIES OPENER

BULLETIN

Bob Grove for Philadelphia bested Burleigh Grimes for St. Louis today in the opening contest of the annual baseball classic, the world's series, and Philadelphia is the victor. The score of the game was 5-2.

The Mackmen took a lead in the second inning but were passed in the third when the Cards scored twice. Al Simmons tied the count with a long home run to left field in the last half of the sixth a double by Jimmy Dykes with Max Bishop on first base gave the A's their winning margin.

The Cards outthrew the Athletics nine to five but all the A's hits were turned into runs.

BY JAMES L. KILGALLEN.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 1.—Staid, historic Philadelphia cast aside its traditional dignity today and paid homage to King Baseball.

For at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon, in the presence of President Hoover and a capacity crowd of 33,000 spectators, many of them frantic with excitement, the Philadelphia Athletics and the St. Louis Cardinals clashed at Shibe Park in the opening game of the 1930 world series—a set of combats that promise thrills and drama galore.

The President was scheduled to toss out the first ball. Betting was even money that it would be a wild pitch.

Cool, fair weather, suitable for topcoats, will prevail, according to the weather man.

A deep mystery, based on psychology, has been thrown by Manager Connie Mack of the A's over the question of who will be his starting pitcher. "The experts believe he will be 'Lefty' Grove, the fireball king, but they suspect Mack may 'cross' them as he did a year ago and spring a 'dark horse'."

GRIMES IS CHOICE

On the other hand, Manager Gabby Street of the Red Birds is making no secret of his opening pitcher. He will be Burleigh Grimes, a great "money player" who hurled a wicked spit ball.

Eleventh hour reports that Frankie Frisch, star second baseman of the Cardinals, would be unable to play in the series because of an attack of lumbago were denied by both Manager Street and Frisch himself.

"I have a backache but no backache is going to keep me out of this world series," said Frisch, with characteristic grit. "I'll be in there this afternoon if they have to carry me out on the diamond."

Frisch caught a severe cold in his back in a recent game in St. Louis. He told the writer when he stepped off the train the other day that his back was giving him trouble but he felt certain it would not prevent him from playing in the series. When the Cardinals worked out yesterday afternoon at Shibe Park, Frisch was not present and this gave rise to the rumor that he was "out" for the series. Last night he underwent hot lamp and massage treatments by Dr. Hyland, the Cardinals' club physician.

The medical verdict was that while Frisch is not in the best of condition he will be able to play.

Heavy betting on the outcome of the series was reported today and the odds, which had been 13 to 10 with the Athletics the favorites, were hammered down to even money. Betting was six to five on the A's providing "Lefty" Grove pitches, and even money if Mack nominated any other pitcher.

Tragic End to Noted Career

It happened in a room in one of the Capital's most fashionable hotels. CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—Jack Guzik, field marshal for "Scarface" Al Capone and second in command to the gang overlord, was free today after posting $50,000 in bonds when seized by federal operatives on charges of income tax evasion.

After posting $50,000 in currency, said to be the largest cash bond ever given in the federal court here, the gangster was released with preliminary hearing set for Oct. 15.

No sooner had he stepped from the courtroom than city detectives arrested him a second time on a vagrancy warrant. Again his bondsmen acted and Guzik was once more free after $10,000 had been left as bond.

Further evidence of the government's drive on gangdom was seen in the summons asking George Barker and Jack White, two more "public enemies" to explain their income tax arithmetic to the internal revenue department.

GERMANS PLAN REDUCTION OF OFFICIALS' PAY

Breuning Program Receives Support of Republicans, Wrath of Fascists.

PRESIDENT ACTS

Labor Head Says Germany Living Too High.

BERLIN, Oct. 1.—Chancellor Heinrich Brüning, fortified with a definite program that includes some of the most drastic reform measures and expenditure cuts ever made by governments, today looked past political opponents to the nation itself for approval and support of his measures.

He already has the powerful support of President Paul von Hindenburg, who is believed ready to again dissolve the Reichstag and assume dictatorship on Oct. 13 or thereafter if the legislative body refuses to accept the government program.

Chief among the proposals made by Brüning are salary cuts for government employees, including those of President Hindenburg and members of the cabinet. Salary slashes of the executive and the ministers would amount to about 20 per cent, other officials and Reichstag deputies average six per cent.

Simplification in the machinery of governmental administration and taxation formed part of the program. A loan of some $180,000,000 was contemplated to cover a huge deficit expected at the end of the fiscal year.

An internal loan of 300,000,000 marks (about $75,000,000) also was contemplated. The loans will be negotiated through Dr. Hans Luther, president of the Reichsbank.

The fascists, alarmed by the new threat of dictatorship, threatened to invoke impeachment proceedings against the president if he attempted to take autocratic power into his own hands.

BUSINESS PLEASED
Business men in general and stock exchange investors welcomed Brüning's program as a drastic step to curb "governmental squandering." The Deutsche Allgemeine, prominent Republican daily, declared the measures signified the collapse of state socialism "which can flourish only in boom periods on a rising government income."

The net result of the program was summed up by Labor Minister Stegerwald, who said it meant "Germany must reduce its living standard by 10 per cent."

The chances of putting the program into effect without recourse to a dictatorship seemed darker than ever today. Socialist leaders themselves were reticent to discuss the measures, but their official mouthpiece, the Socialist newspaper Vorwärts, openly denounced the program as a "one-sided favor to the propertied element" in the country.

Some observers saw in the program German's platform for revision of the Young plan for reparations payments, holding its drastic measures prove beyond all shadow of doubt that this country's present war burdens are too great for it to bear.

Dayton Is Scene of Crash; Man, 67, Fails To See Train Approaching.

DAYTON, O., Oct. 1.—Two persons were instantly killed at a railroad crossing here today when their automobile was struck by a fast Pennsylvania passenger train and both were ground beneath the wheels of the flyer.

The victims were William Phipps, 67, and his wife, Minnie, 60, of this city. Jack Spinks, only witness to the tragedy, said that he made a futile effort to stop Phipps after he noticed that the aged man was unaware of the approaching train.

The automobile was demolished and the bodies of the man and wife were horribly mangled.

Mrs. Eva Eddy Bailey, 42, mother of the baby and five other children, was arrested together with Clyde McBee, 45, and James Dunn, 29, all of Matamoras.

Mrs. Bailey, according to officials, said the two men were rowing across the river Sunday night and that they threw her in the water and threatened to drown the child. According to Mrs. Bailey, she made her way to shore and summoned help.

GERMANS PLAN REDUCTION OF OFFICIALS' PAY

Bruening Program Receives Support of Republicans, Wrath of Fascists.

PRESIDENT ACTS

Labor Head Says Germany Living Too High.

BERLIN, Oct. 1.—Chancellor Heinrich Bruening, fortified with a definite program that includes some of the most drastic reform measures and expenditure cuts ever made by governments, today looked past political opponents to the nation itself for approval and support of his measures.

He already has the powerful support of President Paul Von Hindenburg, who is believed ready to again dissolve the Reichstag and assume dictatorship on Oct. 13 or thereafter if the legislative body refuses to accept the government program.

Chief among the proposals made by Bruening are salary cuts for government employees, including those of President Hindenburg and members of the cabinet. Salary slashes of the executive and the ministers would amount to about 20 per cent, other officials and Reichstag deputies average six per cent.

Simplification in the machinery of governmental administration and taxation formed part of the program. A loan of some $150,000,000 was contemplated to cover a huge deficit expected at the end of the fiscal year.

An internal loan of 300,000,000 marks (about $75,000,000) also is contemplated. The loans will be negotiated through Dr. Hans Luther, president of the Reichstag. The Fascists, alarmed by the new threat of dictatorship, threatened to invoke impeachment proceedings against the president if he attempted to take autocratic power into his own hands.

BUSINESS PLEASED
Business men in general and stock exchange investors welcomed Bruening's program as a drastic step to curb "governmental squandering." The Deutsche Allgemeine, prominent Republican daily, declared the measures signified the collapse of state socialism "which can flourish only in boom periods on a rising government income."

The net result of the program was summed up by Labor Minister Stegerwald, who said it meant "Germany must reduce its living standard by 10 per cent."

The chances of putting the program into effect without recourse to a dictatorship seemed darker than ever today. Socialist leaders themselves were reticent to discuss the measures, but their official mouthpiece, the Socialist newspaper Vorwaerts, openly denounced the program as a "one-sided favor to the propertied element" in the country.

Some observers saw in the program German's platform for revision of the Young plan for reparations payments, holding its drastic measures prove beyond all shadow of doubt that this country's present war burdens are too great for it to bear.

QUEER MALADY STRIKES FAMILY

MARION, O., Oct. 1.—A rare illness which physicians have called "milk sickness," today was believed to have been responsible for the death of one person and the serious illness of three others in a Marion-co family.

The victim is Maxine Cook, 15, her mother, Mrs. Harley Cook, her grandmother, Mrs. Mary Reed and the father are ill. The father has been stricken for four weeks. The strange malady is believed to have resulted from the use of milk from cows that have eaten a weed called "white snake root."

NEGRO SLAYER FOUND HANGED

Body of Willie Clark Found Dangling From Tree; Had Murdered Officer.

CARTERSVILLE, Ga., Oct. 1.—Dangling from a limb of an oak tree, the body of John Will Clark, negro, who confessed to the slaying of Police Chief Jenkins of Cartersville, was found by a squad of county officers today.

Several hours earlier the negro was seized by a mob of fifty white men who overpowered three guards at the Bartow-co jail. The white men whisked the prisoner away. Officers followed, but did not locate the negro until dawn when his body was found hanging to a tree a mile below here.

A special coroner's investigation into the lynching was ordered to begin at once.

The mobmen gathered around the jail early in the morning. Ten of the men, apparently unarmed, entered the jail, overpowered the three guards, seized the keys, and opened the negro's cell. He was then dragged through the jail yard into the country.

Clark, since his arrest for the killing of the chief of police has been held in Atlanta for safe keeping. He was brought back here for trial yesterday, and defense counsel immediately entered a motion for a change of venue, asserting that the sentiment of the community precluded the possibility of the negro of obtaining an impartial trial.

After hearing a number of witnesses on the issue, Judge Pittman announced he would overrule the motion. Defense counsel thereupon presented a bill of exceptions to his ruling, necessitating a postponement of the trial until the supreme court could rule on the bill. The bench announced that he would call a special trial immediately after the supreme court ruled on the issue and that in the meantime the prisoner would remain in the jail here instead of being sent back to Atlanta.

He is to speak here on Thursday evening at the Bogs Hotel to members of the Chamber of Commerce, Kiwanis and Rotary, giving one of the other of his two famous dramatic lectures, "Sparks" or "Tall Dips".

Miles was religious editor for the New York Journal and his boss in those days was none other than Arthur Brisbane, then managing editor of that paper. He and Brisbane worked hand in hand for many years and he was sent to all parts of the world to cover big events and interview outstanding personalities. Out of these experiences he has woven a really great lecture that fairly teems with dramatic picturization, philosophy and wholesome humor.

He acts it all out right before your eyes. The outstanding characteristic of his success on the platform is his ability to vividly portray the big moments he has lived.

MIAMI FACES ILLINOIS "B"

Big Reds Come Out of Indiana Game in Good Shape, Despite 14-0 Defeat.

OXFORD, Ohio, October 1.—The Miami University Big Reds, with the opening game of the season out of the way, will this week prepare for the invasion of the strong Illinois "B" team Saturday at Oxford. The 14-0 victory of Indiana last Saturday does not indicate the strength of the Miami eleven, as the Big Reds outplayed the Hoosiers the entire first half and gained more yards than their opponents. While the Indiana team displayed strength in their two touchdown drives, the Miami team showed itself to be well coached and defensively strong.

The running of Wilbur Cartwright, Miamisburg, halfback, was the feature of the game. He was by far the best ball carrier on the field, getting the longest gain from scrimmage and returning two kickoffs 48 and 55 yards. The hitherto unknown strength of Miami's sophomores and subs was clearly indicated. Coach Pittner had his entire second string eleven in the game at least two quarters. The generalship of G. Cheadle at quarter, who took Games' place at the beginning of the second quarter, and the defensive playing of Willis Weits, Ashland, tackle, and V. Cheadle, center, were especially satisfying.

Coach Pittner will reorganize his offense this week as the Indiana game showed its lack of deception and versatility. Forward pass offense and defense will be stressed.

The Miami team came out of the game in comparatively good condition. G. Cheadle will be out for several weeks with a dislocated shoulder and Urban Vaccarello, Cleveland, regular tackle, will not likely get into the Illinois game because of a badly battered face.

Illinois will probably send a very strong team to Miami Saturday. Most of the Illinois sophomore strength will be present to get properly seasoned for later Varsity competition. However, with the fine showing made against Indiana as an inspiration, the Oxford school hopes to come through with a victory.

POLICE SHATTER AUTO THEFT RING

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—With recovery of seventeen stolen automobiles from a cache at nearby McLean, Va., local police today believed they had unearthed a national auto theft ring.

All of the recovered cars had been stolen from the streets of the capital since Sept. 1, according to police. They were led to the cache by two brothers, Marshall B. and Howard V. Goding, whose statements caused the arrest of Ollie W. Jackson. Howard Goding was said to have come from Tampa, Fla., several weeks ago.

Jackson denied knowledge of a "ring" but was detained when police found a number changing stencil on him.

At the cache in a wooded section of McLean, was found equipment for changing tires, motor numbers and other marks of identification. Most of the cars were of expensive make.

SELECTED SEED CORN EXPLAINED

The time of year has again arrived when farmers may take the precaution to insure the 1931 corn crop. A number of Pickaway-county farmers have already selected seed corn from standing stalks and are storing it where it will mature and dry out before severe freezing weather arrives. Selecting seed corn this year is much more difficult than in ordinary seasons. The most mature ears will be the essential item to observe in the selection of seed corn this fall. Type, character of the hill and position of the ear on the stalk will need to be sacrificed under the circumstances which have been created by the hazard of the drought. It takes, approximately 16 to 18 ears of corn to plant an acre.

It is wise to select from 30 to 36 ears of seed corn for each acre which is planned for 1931 seeding. This affords the grower an opportunity to cull his seed corn, first, as he puts it on the dryer; and again when it has dried out and he starts to culling it for disease presence and the shelling operation next spring. The broader house with a little heat has proven a very satisfactory means of preparing seed corn against the hazards of extreme temperature which frequently occurs before the corn would normally be dried out. In storing seed corn in the granary or barn, the ears should be placed on the drier so that they do not touch each other, giving an opportunity for the air to circulate about the ears and help dry them out.

GRANDVIEW IS NEXT ON SKED

Hundley and White On Side-Lines With Injuries, Expected To Be O. K.

Perfection of offensive play has held an important place in the practice session of Coach Herbert's Tiger squad during this fall. The squad, the largest one which ever reported at Ohio University, is working out daily under the coaching of William Herbert and L. J. Trepp, freshmen mentors. The Bobkittens have been impressive in scrimmage against the varsity team which indicates the 1930 squad is the best to report here in five years. With the exception of a picked squad which works against the Ohio varsity, the yearling team will be trained throughout

The fight both of these lads showed in the Lancaster game is certain to again come to the fore before this important contest with Grandview at the latter place Friday afternoon. A fighting spirit such as the entire team showed at Lancaster appears to be one of its greatest assets—and means much when a tough contest like this Grandview tilt is going to be played.

The rest of the squad is in excellent condition and both Hundley and White are expected in their usual places when the whistle blows to start the Grandview tilt, the Tigers' first in Central Buckeye league circles.

BONER WINS FOR ROCHESTER TEAM

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 1.—But one more victory was needed today for the Rochester Internationalals to win the little world series from Louisville.

One smart play in which a third strike was caught on the first bounce by the catcher turned yesterday's game into an 8 to 6 victory for the Easterners, giving them a 4 to 2 advantage over the Cardinals.

Louisville was leading 5 to 1 in the eighth and Penner had struck out Collins and Wilson. Catcher Barnes caught the last strike on the bounce and, failing to throw to first, Wilson raced to first and then to second. Florence then singled, putting the Internationalals one ahead.

PEASANTS SLAIN CROSSING BORDER

LONDON, Oct. 1.—A Soviet massacre of Russian peasants who attempted to cross the frontier into Poland was witnessed recently by Polish customs officials on the border post of Vileika, central news dispatches from Warsaw said today in recounting detailed accounts of the incident published in newspapers of that capital.

According to the reports, Soviet agents turned machine guns on the peasants seeking to flee Russia and mowed down at least 150 of them while the Polish customs officials watched helplessly.

GRANDVIEW IS NEXT ON SKED

Hundley and White, On Side-Lines With Injuries, Expected To Be O. K.

Perfection of offensive play has held an important place in the practice session of Coach Herbert's Tiger squad during this week with two of the backs unable to practice on account of injuries received in the Lancaster game last Friday. Bob Hundley who toted the ball through the Lancaster line, for many gains is suffering from a leg injury and Dean White who did good work in the Tiger backfield in this contest is nursing an injured back.

The fight both of these lads showed in the Lancaster game is certain to again come to the fore before this important contest with Grandview at the latter place Friday afternoon. A fighting spirit such as the entire team showed at Lancaster appears to be one of its greatest assets—and means much when a tough contest like this Grandview tilt is going to be played.

The rest of the squad is in excellent condition and both Hundley and White are expected in their usual places when the whistle blows to start the Grandview tilt, the Tigers' first in Central Buckeye league circles.

BONER WINS FOR ROCHESTER TEAM

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 1.—But one more victory was needed today for the Rochester International to win the little world series from Louisville.

One smart play in which a third strike was caught on the first bounce by the catcher turned yesterday's game into an 8 to 6 victory for the Easterners, giving them a 4 to 2 advantage over the Cardinals.

Louisville was leading 5 to 4 in the eighth and Penner had struck out Collins and Wilson. Catcher Barnes caught the last strike on the bounce and, failing to throw to first, Wilson raced to first and then to second. Florence then singled, putting the International one ahead.

PEASANTS SLAIN CROSSING BORDER

LONDON, Oct. 1.—A Soviet massacre of Russian peasants who attempted to cross the frontier into Poland was witnessed recently by Polish customs officials on the border post of Vileika, central news dispatches from Warsaw said today in recounting detailed accounts of the incident published in newspapers of that capital.

According to the reports, Soviet agents turned machine guns on the peasants seeking to flee Russia and mowed down at least 150 of them while the Polish customs officials watched helplessly.

Butter Long Preserved

When cutting turf on a mountain bog on top of Cruickrooksey hill, Glenegannon, Cardonagh, Ireland, a party of men found two kegs of "bog" butter. The staves of the two kegs crumbled to pieces on removal, but the butter was in a wonderful state of preservation, although buried for several hundred years.

A rummage sale will be held on Friday and Saturday, October 3 and 4 in the Brunner Block, the room formerly occupied by the Express Co. in W. Main-st, under the auspices of the Presbyterian church.

The squad, the largest one which ever reported at Ohio University, is working out daily under the coaching of William Herbert and L. J. Trepp, freshmen mentors. The Bobkittens have been impressive in scrimmage against the varsity team which indicates the 1930 squad is the best to report here in five years. Terrific Uproar Of Planes May Be Checked Now

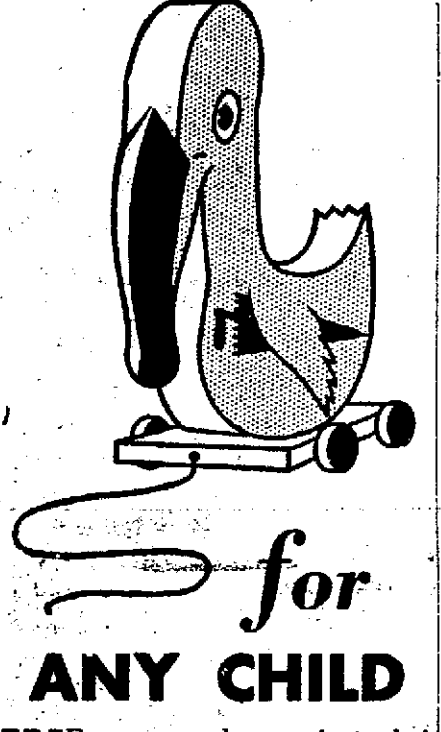

By ROBERT S. THORNBURG
- WASHINGTON, Oct. 1. — After extensive research to develop a sound-proof airplane cabin, the bureau of standards has completed a preliminary study aimed at reducing the noise of aircraft propellers and later in the year will launch an investigation to check the engine roar through the development of new type mufflers, it was learned today.

Both from the commercial and military standpoint the terrific noise of an airplane is one of its principal drawbacks. The tell-tale hum of an airplane even before it could be seen during the war was a "tip-off" to anti-aircraft defense batteries and opposing air forces commercially the average airplane cabin is uncomfortable to passengers because of the roar of the motor and the hum of the propeller.

"The only positive known method of reducing the noise produced by a propeller is to decrease its top speed, which can be accomplished by the use of a propeller geared to the motor instead of directly connected by a shaft, the usual practice," said Dr. H. L. Dryden, in the aerodynamics section of the bureau of standards.

Dryden explained that decreased top speed may be accomplished without loss of power or speed of the aircraft by increasing the diameter or the length of blades of the propeller.

STORE BLAST HURTS MANY

Pittsburgh A. & P. Store Scene of Explosion Today; Cause Unknown.

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 1.—At least twelve persons were injured, several seriously, when a terrific explosion wrecked an Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company chain store here Tuesday.

The injured were loaded into ambulances and rushed to nearby hospitals.

Cause of the blast was not immediately determined. It was believed, however, that seeping gas from a leaking pipe had ignited.

Passerby near the store were hurled to the ground when the blast let go. Several suffered from shock.

A police detail was rushed to the scene to preserve order.

First reports stated that in addition to wrecking the chain store, the explosion had considerably damaged the plant of the consolidated ice company directly across the street.

The building housing the chain store was practically new.

ECUADOR'S LEADER QUILTS, IS REFUSED

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 1.—Although President Isidro Ayora of Ecuador placed his irrevocable resignation before Congress with a request for speedy action on it, dispatches from Quito, Ecuador capital, reported today that the legislative body at a special midnight session definitely refused to accept the resignation.

Information as to whether the executive intended to solve the impasse by reconsidering his resignation was not available.

According to the constitution of Ecuador, the minister of the interior automatically assumes the presidency upon death or withdrawal of the incumbent executive. At present therefore, the post would fall to Colonel Carlos Guerrero, who also is minister of war.

President Ayora, pressed by his cabinet and political leaders to remain in office, insisted on retiring from the executive post on the grounds that in doing so he is acting in the best interests of Ecuador. That, he explained, was the reason he made his resignation "irrevocable."

Appointed to the presidency by a military junta in 1926 which seized power a year previous, Dr. Ayora was constitutionally elected in 1929. The arbitration of the boundary question between Peru and Colombia occupied much of his time.

DARROW TO HELP CHICAGO SUSPECT

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—The police and civilian war against gangdom went ahead today with the apprehension of two more "public enemies." George "Red" Barker and Jack White, alleged labor racketeers.

Surrender of Barker and White late yesterday on vagrancy warrants took police by surprise. They appeared with probably the most famous and expensive array of counsel ever seen in a vagrancy case—Clarence Darrow, W. W. and Milton D. Smith, noted criminal lawyers.

Darrow, reknown as a writer, philosopher and public speaker, had previously announced his retirement from law practice. His reappearance, he said, was prompted by the "outrageous" use of the vagabond law in the present campaign against gangdom.

Bonds were posted for Darrow's two clients and they were released almost immediately. They were to be arraigned today.

Federal Agents Receive Lessons In 12 Districts

By Robert S. Thornburg
WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—With completion of the course in the science of law enforcement at the government's dry "university" here, schools of instruction were opened Tuesday in the 12 administrative districts of the county for the training of the entire prohibition force.

Thirty picked agents, representing the dry districts, were put through an intensive training course here and sent back to their territories to begin the task of imparting to the remainder of the enforcement army new policies as mapped out by director Amos W. W. Woodcock.

The course included all details of prohibition enforcement, with special emphasis placed on modern ideas of the psychology of crime detection and the treatment of suspects after arrest.

At the opening of the school in Washington the agent-students were advised by instructors to make use of boys for "undercover" work, the suggestion being that youngsters get information of bootlegging by playing in the vicinity of buildings under surveillance. Woodcock immediately deleted this "lesson" from the course, however, when it was brought to his attention. He has banned the use of boys in enforcement work.

The district schools will be of two weeks duration and will be held in all principal cities of the country. Supervisor H. M. Dengler, who was the chief instructor at the Washington school, will continue to direct the training work.

The dry agents will be admonished particularly against discourteous enforcement work. Woodcock frequently has emphasized his hope to build up a well trained force of agents who by their methods will create a greater respect for the prohibition law.

Instructors at the dry schools will warn agents that only lawful methods of enforcement will be countenanced by Woodcock. Careful attention will be devoted to ob-

L. Dryden, in the aerodynamics section of the bureau of standards. Dryden explained that decreased top speed may be accomplished without loss of power or speed of the aircraft by increasing the diameter or the length of blades of the propeller.

"As a matter of fact," this expert continued, "it has been found the greater the diameter of the propeller the greater the efficiency of the plane. Gearing is advantageous because of a decrease in the interference of the body of the propeller and a consequent increased aerodynamic efficiency.

"Delay in a more general adoption of geared propellers is due to the greater weight and to the existence of mechanical difficulties in the construction of suitable gears. The difficulties are rapidly being overcome."

Dryden said that some of the transport planes already are being equipped with geared propellers.

Preliminary studies show that engine noise can be reduced by the use of a muffler and the most effective principle to use in designing the muffler is to make a good cooler of the exhaust gases.

One of the intense sources of sound on an airplane is the propeller. Research has disclosed that because of the high pitch or high frequency of the sound wave originating with the whirling propeller the sound is carried for a great distance. The exact mechanism by which the sound is produced is not clearly understood, but it is believed to originate in the pressure variations existent in a turbulent flow of air past the blades.

STATE UNIVERSITY BEGINS 58TH YEAR

Total Enrollment Expected To Surpass 11,000; President Talks.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 1 — Ohio State University here began its 58th year Tuesday as classes for the fall quarter term were started. The total enrollment this year is expected to exceed the 11,000 mark with 9575 students having paid tuition when classes began.

President George W. Rightmire, of the university, issued a statement today in which he declared that overcrowded conditions in many of the departments had prompted a last-minute change in schedules. The overcrowding, he said, would necessitate the scheduling of many classes at unpopular hours, such as at 12 o'clock noon, 4 and 5 p. m., and a number of Saturday sessions.

AND CAMELS are easy to smoke. Here's smoke with joy in it—a light-hearted cigarette—merry and mild. Don't confuse Camel's mellow mildness with mere flatness or lack of flavor. Every bit of delicate aroma in Camel's naturally mild, sun-mellowed tobaccos is preserved by scientific care in manufacture—kept in Camels for you to enjoy. And you can smoke them all day with never a hint of throat discomfort.

Mild—not flat. Modern smokers are awake to that difference. They're swinging to Camels, and the mild fragrance of a cigarette made to be enjoyed.

THE ROMANCE OF AN EVENTFUL WHALING CRUISE

Less Scotch in Scotland

SOME Americans are saddened, and others pleased by the news that the output of Scotch whisky is being reduced 25 per cent. In some quarters this is considered even more important than the golf championship.

The practical effect on our nation will probably be slight. It isn't evident that much "genuine Scotch" has been coming to this country, either directly or via Canada. So the matter can be discussed philosophically. And on that ground we discover some interesting things.

England, it appears, has a "royal drink commission" which has been busy for six months inquiring into the subject of "prohibition versus temperance." It finds that there is less demand for spirituous liquors for two reasons. First, the heavy government tax, which is about $2 a bottle. Second, the effectiveness of dry propaganda.

Another phenomenon of interest to Americans is the spread of bootlegging in Great Britain. The liquor tax, while evidently promoting temperance, has also promoted the production of synthetic liquor even as we know it. Numerous deaths from methyl alcohol have been reported. And now nobody can be sure of getting pure Scotch even in Scotland.

What if Coste left Paris without any money? Everybody does.

Quarters for the Bus

WHERE to put the garage is always a problem. If placed at the rear end of the lot, the drive eats up too much of the property and the back yard may be ruined.

Two ways have been adopted lately by builders to solve this problem.

One is to put the garage in what used to be regarded as the front of the house. There may be a living room alongside of it, or the house may be turned face inward, fronting on a spacious back yard instead of the front yard.

This arrangement works very well if all the homes in a block are treated in this same way. It gives the effect of an inner private park for the block neighborhood, and it makes driving in and out of the garage very easy.

Another solution, and a more recent one, worked out in allotting the big John D. Rockefeller estate in Cleveland, is to place the garage in the basement. This is accomplished by raising the house a little higher than usual and slightly depressing the driveway, preserving the usual front yard and leaving the back yard entirely free. It looks like an excellent plan where economy of space is an object.

Hay Fever Refuges

BEFORE many years it is expected, the medical profession will find some defense against hay fever which the victim can utilize at home. For the present and immediate future his only safety seems to be in flight. He must escape to some region where the particular pollens that poison him do not exist and climatic conditions are more favorable.

Generally speaking, there is immunity in mountains, in the forests of our most northerly states, on the coast of Maine, Florida, and California and in most parts of Canada. But there is only one cure that can be guaranteed. That, says the New York Board of Health, is an ocean voyage.

That, by the way, takes a little time. The victim who rushes to Europe, in this hay fever season, on one of the fastest liners, and turns right around and rushes back, may find himself as bad off as ever. The longer the voyage, the better. Immunity can only be guaranteed while the patient is on his sea voyage.

Evidently we need hay fever fleets, cruising about in a leisurely and comfortable manner until the dread season is over. Or if the victims fear seasickness as much as their pet ailment, how about hay fever hotels on those airplane landing stages that are to be placed in mid-ocean? They would be happy isles to flee to.

CHAPTER XLVII.

WILLIS had been asleep; he was in shirt and trousers, his belt tight-girted. He stared stupidly, not understanding.

Dan'l, balked of his chance at Brander, took Willis for fair game. If he thought at all, it was to remember that Willis was loyal to Faith. He attacked before Willis was fully awake, and bore the other man back into the cabin from which he had come.

Dan'l bent Willis against the bunks, so that for an instant it seemed the man's back would snap; but desperation gave Willis the strength to fling himself away. They whirled into the cabin, still fighting. Dan'l was drunk with his own rage by now. He had thrown himself into a debauch of battle; and he proved this night that he could fight when he chose.

He rocked Willis at last with a left-hand blow in the ribs, so that the younger man dropped his arms to hug his bruised body; and Dan'l drove home his fist to the other's jaw. The blow smacked loudly, and Willis fell without a sound.

If old Tichel had come down the companion-ladder a minute sooner he might have saved Willis, and he and Willis between them could have overcome Dan'l. But he was too late for that; he was in time to see Willis fall; and before he could speak, Dan'l Tobey had attacked him.

Dan'l was pure maniac now; he did not stop to ask whether Tichel was friend or foe. Tichel, old man though he was, was never one to refuse a battle. He met Dan'l's charge with the tigerish venom that characterized him in his rage; he leaped and was fairly in the air when Dan'l struck him. But Dan'l's greater weight and the impetus of his charge were too much for old Tichel. In the flash of a second Dan'l had him by the throat, banging his head against the floor till the skin of his scalp was crushed and the blood flowed, and Tichel at last lay still.

Dan'l got up, choking for breath, his chin down on his chest. There was blood on him; his shirt was torn; his hair was wild. The mild, round face of the man was distorted by wrinkles of passion. His lip was bruised by a blow, and he puffed out in a surly, drunken way. He stood there, tottering, looking with blinking eyes at the heap of men fighting at one side of the cabin.

Brander was in that heap somewhere. Dan'l stepped unsteadily toward the heap of men, peered down at them, and laid hands on them to pull them away. They were too closely interwined.

He backed off and looked around for a weapon. In a corner of the cabin he saw something that might serve. It was the head of a knife—four feet long, flattened at one end like the blade of a cut-throat razor, and ground to the keenest edge. For use, it would be mounted on a staff; but there was no staff in it now. He picked the thing up, balanced it in his hands, and walked gingerly back toward the struggling knot of men.

When Brander dropped down into the cabin, and through the open door saw Faith in Dan'l's arms, he was paralyzed for an instant. Then, as rage surged up in him, he sensed the danger above him, and dodged one side as Silva leaped down from the deck. Silva struck against Brander's hip, his knife slitting the air. Brander was thrown headlong, and Silva flung after him. Brander rolled on his back, catching Silva in the stomach with both feet, as the other two men dropped across his body.

He had put little force into his kick at Silva, so that the man was unhurt. Brander gripped one of the men who had fallen on him, and whirled him under. At the same time the other man attacked himself to Brander's back, his right arm about Brander's neck to choke him. Brander wedged his chin down and gripped this arm between his chin and his breast, holding it off a little from his throat. Then Silva came at him from the left side, and Brander's left hand flung out and gripped Silva's knife-wrist.

Brander was past the first flush of anger; he was cool now as he was always cool in danger. Save Silva, the men against him were unarmed. At any rate, neither made any effort to use a weapon. Therefore Brander flung the one man out of his arms, and gave his attention to Silva.

He was just in time. Silva had shifted the knife to his other biting far up into the soft flesh at the bottom of the mouth. He got a grip on this bone that would hold; and the man screamed, and Brander jerked him up and over his shoulder. The man slid helplessly, tearing at Brander's clenched fingers.

Brander at this time was sitting up with Silva at his left, arms gripping, fists striking, and the other man at the right. The man whose jaw he held came down in Brander's lap. He brought his right knee up with all his force against the other's head, and the man became a dead weight across his legs. Brander wriggled free of him. He thought calmly that one of the three was gone and only two remained, and turned his attention to the others.

He had been forced to let them have their will of him for the second time required to deal with the man who had choked him. They had him down now on his back on the cabin floor—one on either side of him. He got a left-hand grip on the seaman; he set his right hand on Silva's arm, and his fingers hand. Brander grappled for it, and the blade slid along his fingers, barely scratching them. Then he had the hand that held it; and he dragged it down and wrenched it over, and the fingers opened and the knife fell.

Brander groped for it, Silva swarming over him. He got the knife, but knew he could not use it, so he threw it with the half of his arm which was free. Crushed down by the men atop him, he saw that it slid across the floor and flew into the after cabin.

Brander had not seen Dan'l when the man came first to crouch above them. Dan'l was at Willis when Brander threw the knife. That weapon being gone, Brander turned his attention to the man who had his throat. He worked as coolly as if this man were his only antagonist. While he held off the others with his left hand and his knees, his right hand went up over his shoulder and found the face of the man who choked him. This groping hand of his came down against the man's face from above. His palm roared against the cheek of his antagonist; his thumb against the chin. His fingers groped under the other's jaw-bone and clinched around it, clenched on Silva's biceps. He flung them off a little, freeing himself so that he might have fought to his feet.

But when he thrust these two back thus, to right and left, and started to sit up, he saw Dan'l Tobey above him—Dan'l, with an insane light in his eyes, and the whirling lance poised in a threatening position. The heavy weapon flickered downward like a shaft of light.

Brander wrenched with all his strength at Silva; he swung Silva up and over his own body just in time to intercept the lance. It slid in between Silva's ribs, an inch from the backbone, and pierced him through to the sternum. It struck obliquely and cut half-way into the mingled cartilage and bone. Then the soft iron of the shaft "elbowed" at right angles, and Dan'l had to twist and fight to pull it free.

Silva, of course, was dead. Brander flung the corpse aside, rolling after it to be on his feet before Dan'l should strike again. But the remaining seaman was in his path; they clinched, straining breast to breast.

Theatres

AT THE METROPOLITAN

Playing stellar roles in three hundred plays at one theatre—the Majestic in Los Angeles—is the unique record of Edward Everett Horton, famous stage and screen comedian, whose latest laugh riot "Once A Gentleman" will be presented on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday at the Metropolitan theatre. Practically every play of importance produced in America has been seen at the Majestic, and Horton became Hollywood's most popular stock actor.

Horton has successfully alternated between stage and screen appearances, although he often remarks that he's the only actor who went to Hollywood to appear on the stage. Among his photoplay hits were "Ruggles of Red Gap," "Begger on Horseback," "The Whole Town's Talking," and "Taxi, Taxi." His first talking picture was "The Terror."

AT THE CLIFTONA

Greta Garbo's second all-talking picture, "Romance," adapted from the noted stage play by Edward Sheldon, in which Doris Keane played the starring role for a record run here and abroad, will open Wednesday at the Cliftona theatre. In the supporting cast are Lewis Stone, Gavin Gordon, Elliott Nugent, Florence Lake, Clara Bladick, Henry Armetta, Mathilde Comont and Countess Nina de Liguoro. Clarence Brown, responsible to a great extent for the overwhelming success of Miss Garbo's initial talking vehicle, "Anna Christie" again directed.

The story which depicts the frustrated romance of a foreign opera prima donna is laid in the picturesque setting of New York as it appeared in 1865. As is customary with Metro-Goldwin-Mayer in respect to Miss Garbo's productions, no expense was spared in equipping the picture with realistic atmosphere even to the extent of reproducing in detail an entire area of New York's historic Washington Square with its park, aristocratic mansions and other interesting details.

LOYAL TEMPERANCE LEGION HAS MEETING

An enjoyable evening was spent Tuesday at the United Brethren Church where the local Loyal Temperance Legion held an interesting contest. The services, in charge of Mrs. Bessie Long, were opened with a flag drill and patriotic exercises followed by devotionals.

One after another the five speakers delivered their orations in a manner that clearly showed careful study and practice. Lillie May French and Betty Jane May played piano solos and a pleasing duet was sung by Verna Bowman and Evelyn Pierce which added much to the program.

While the judges were out, Noah Spangler gave a splendid temperance talk which he reinforced with some prohibition facts claimed from a current publication.

After the judges' decision the medal was presented by Mrs. Abbie Gusman, the county director of contests, to the winner, Carl Drake, whose subject was "A Boy's Resolve".

Boxes of candy were also presented to the other contestants, Violet McCollister, Lucille May, Dorothy Jenkins and Harold Imbler.

The singing of "Blest Be the Tie" and the pronouncing of the Benediction closed the program for the evening.
